Course Description:

This course is an introduction to the main Western philosophical theories of ethics. Students will examine how particular moral problems are treated within theoretical frameworks that each emphasize different considerations, such as what sort of person is morally admirable, how one should live, what good motives for action are, whether there are certain actions that are morally obligatory or morally prohibited, whether one should consider anything other than the consequences of one's actions, what role the moral emotions should play, when impartiality is appropriate, and what the value of care is. Students will question and develop their own views of morality through class discussion.

Course Objectives:

- To survey historical and contemporary work in Western philosophical ethics.
- To have students develop their own original, critical thinking about each of the theories studied, and identify and articulate their own position in ethics.
- To have students learn and practice philosophical skills; these skills include understanding difficult texts; analyzing, constructing, and responding critically to arguments; engaging in conceptual thinking; developing, articulating, and defending their own positions both verbally and in writing; thinking in complex and original ways.

This course satisfies the Humanities ("H") General Education Requirement.

Learning Outcomes: Students in H courses will demonstrate an understanding of human experience through the study of literature or philosophy.

Text:

Ethical Theory, Moral Concerns by Daniel DeNicola.

The text is in the form of a coursepack, available at the bookstore. All other readings are available under "Content" on Blackboard/myCourses and/or are available online through a provided link. You must always have a copy of the day's reading with you in class. For readings that are available electronically, either print or bring an electronic device so you can refer to the reading in class.

This semester we will be piloting Ethical Theory, Moral Concerns – in other words, the textbook is in manuscript form, and the author is still in the process of revising it. I have chosen this textbook because upon reviewing it, I found it to be better, even in manuscript form, than other available texts for this course. Throughout the semester, I will be asking you to provide feedback for the author, which he will take into consideration as he revises the book. You have the opportunity to shape a new textbook, and any suggestions that you would like to make about it will be appreciated.

Course Requirements:

This course is a 4-credit course, which means that in addition to attending and participating in class meetings, students are expected to do at least 9.5 hours of course-related work outside of class each week during the semester. This includes time spent completing assigned readings, taking notes and reflecting on the readings, writing responses, and studying for tests.

Class preparation and participation:

Please avoid scheduling travel, appointments, etc., to conflict with class time. Email me before class time if you are ill and will be missing class. More than three absences will result automatically in failure of the course, unless you provide adequate documentation showing that all absences were due to illness or emergency. Do give serious attention to the quality—not just the quantity—of your participation in discussions. If you find it difficult to speak in class discussions, please come talk to me about this during the first week or two of the semester, and we will devise a plan for you to practice this kind of speaking, and for me to grade your participation appropriately.

If I, or your classmates, are pronouncing your name wrong, using the wrong pronouns for you, etc., please correct us! Also please let me know if there is anything I can do to facilitate your learning or accommodate your particular learning style.

150-200 word responses:

There are 13 written responses due, as listed in the schedule. They are due by 9:00 PM on the evening before the topic will be discussed in class, and are to be submitted via Blackboard/myCourses (there is a link to each assignment under “Content”). Late responses will not receive credit. The response presented on the last day of class may also earn you a bonus point. I will share selected responses for discussion in class, anonymously. You may write “please don’t share this response” (or something similar) on your response if you do not want it to be shared. Please feel free, but not obligated, to reveal that you are the author of a response that is shared in class.

There are two types of responses assigned:

- 1) Responses to either “Questions for Discussion” or “Reflective Questions.”
These questions can be found at the end of each chapter of Ethical Theory, Moral Concerns.
- 2) “Are you a _____?” responses.
Each of these responses must begin with either “Yes,” “No,” or “It’s complicated,” and then go on to explain (why are you a _____? what are the claims made by _____ that you agree with?) and justify (that is, offer reasons in support of) your response. It is fine to change your mind about your position as the course progresses! (So, if in week 5 you claim that you are a Utilitarian, but then in week 6 you decide you are really a Kantian, your responses should reflect this change).

All responses should demonstrate a clear understanding of the relevant reading(s), and should engage critically with the reading(s). All responses will be graded anonymously—I will see your names only after I have submitted grades for all responses.

Grading of responses:

- 0 = did not complete the assignment (on time), or outside of word limits, or showed little or no understanding of the reading, or very poorly written, etc.
- 1 = showed at least some understanding of the reading and at least some development of and argument in support of the response.
- 2 = showed excellent understanding of the reading and developed and supported the response well.

Total points

22 or more =	A
20-21 =	A-
18-19 =	B+
16-17 =	B
14-15 =	B-
12-13 =	C+
10-11 =	C
8-9 =	C-
7 =	D
6 or below =	F

Tests:

There will be two tests, each on approximately half of the course material. Tests are open book and open notes. This means that you do not have to memorize anything. However, don't let this fool you into thinking that you don't need to study. The questions will require critical thinking about the material; you will not just be asked to regurgitate material. You may write your answers by hand or on an electronic device (preferred), but you may not go online during the tests, until you are ready to log on to submit your test.

Tests will be graded anonymously.

Tests may be made up only with a documented excuse (due to illness or emergency), and must be made up within a week of the date for which you have an excuse.

Grading:

- 50% 150-200 word responses
- 25% Test #1
- 25% Test #2

The final grade may be raised or lowered by a plus or minus (e.g. from a B- to a B, from an A- to a B+, etc) depending on the quality of class participation.

Disability-related equal access accommodations: I am happy to make accommodations (e.g. extended time, quiet environment, etc.) for any student with a documented need for it. Please talk with me by Jan 30 if you are requesting accommodations (talk with me by this date even if you do not yet have your documentation). If you are unsure about whether or not you need, or qualify for, accommodations, I encourage you to visit the Services for Students with Disabilities (SSD) office: <http://www.binghamton.edu/ssd/>.

Academic Honesty: I follow the Philosophy Department policy on academic honesty (see below); furthermore, any student who plagiarizes or commits any other form of academic dishonesty will receive an F for the course. Students are responsible for being familiar with, and abiding by, the Student Academic Honesty Code.

Philosophy Department Guidelines on Academic Honesty

The Philosophy Department considers plagiarism and other forms of academic dishonesty to be serious breaches of the code of ethics governing academic life. They are also violations of Harpur College and Binghamton University policies.

In order to contribute to a culture of Academic Honesty within both the Department and the University, the Philosophy Department has agreed on the following guidelines:

- 1) Instructors will include a statement describing their policy regarding Academic Honesty on all course syllabi.
- 2) When a student commits an act of academic dishonesty, the instructor will formally bring the violation to the attention of the Harpur College Academic Honesty Committee by either:
 - a. submitting an Admission of Dishonesty Form that has been signed by the student,
 - or*
 - b. initiating a hearing before the Harpur College Academic Honesty Committee.
- 3) When a student commits an act of academic dishonesty, the instructor for the course will not give the student credit for the assignment, whether or not the student re-submits honest work.
- 4) Instructors will decide what further grade consequences are appropriate in response to the dishonesty at their own discretion; the typical consequence is a grade of 'F' for the course.
